On her third album 'Cañailla' (which means 'from the San Fernando Island', in Cádiz), Niña explores her flamenco roots without straying too far from the pop style that has allowed her to appeal more easily to younger audiences. The promotional single 'Cai', which is 'Cádiz' but pronounced in Andalusia jargon, was written by Alejandro Sáenz, and refers to Niña's Andalusian origins. Along the nine tracks of 'Cañailla', Niña Pastori visits some of the most festive flamenco palos, like bulerías, alegrías y tangos.

Palos:

Bulerias - Rumba - Alegrias - Tangos
